Description

A Japanese cloisonné enamel vase of elongated form, with a short flared neck, decorated against a glossy black ground with a naturalistic scene depicting a rooster and a hen. The rooster is distinguished by its large red comb and multicoloured plumage, while the hen is rendered in delicate shades of white and brown. At their feet are three chicks with yellow and grey plumage, surrounded by slender branches, grasses and small flowers. The decoration is executed in enamels with soft tonal gradations, outlined by fine silver wires that precisely define the feathers, wings and other details. The broad dark ground enhances the luminosity of the colours and gives particular prominence to the composition.Period: Meiji, late 19th century.Dimensions: 18.5 x 7.5 cm.Condition: Excellent condition, with slight
