Description

An antique polychrome porcelain figurine from the German manufacturer Karl Ens, depicting a bee-eater perched on a tree branch.The bird, with a long, slightly curved black beak, features plumage in contrasting colors, combining turquoise blue, green, and reddish-brown. Its head is accented by a black band across the eyes, while its wings and long tail are finely modeled.The design is enhanced by a glossy glaze that highlights the texture of the plumage.The bird rests on a stylized tree branch made of white porcelain, which serves as a pedestal.Marked "Karl Ens" in blue on the underside of the base.Height: 17 cm.In very good condition.
