Description

A large gateleg table from France, painted in a soft off-white. Gateleg tables have been popular for centuries because of their clever design: with the leaves folded down the table takes up very little space, and with the leaves raised it seats a large company.The oval top consists of a long central board and two wide drop leaves, supported by swing-out gates. The table stands on a rich arrangement of turned baluster legs, connected by low stretchers and ending in block feet. With both leaves up, the table measures 200 by 150 cm; folded, it is only 50 cm deep.The table is made of solid oak, painted in a creamy off-white that has worn naturally over the years. On the legs, feet and edges of the top the bare wood shows through, giving it the relaxed, lived-in charm of a French country house.A
