Description

DescriptionAn unidentified artist painted this still life in oils in the second half of the 20th century, working in the Old Master tradition. The painting revisits a genre in which ordinary objects become the focus of a composition, and their placement, the spaces between them and the play of light all contribute to the arrangement. It belongs to a later generation of paintings that kept the traditional still life in use as a subject for oil painting. The work would suit a dining room or study and could be displayed alongside other still lifes to show how the genre continued into the 20th century.ArtistThe artist is presently unidentified.Artist DetailsThe artist's background and region are unknown. The work is described as being in the Old Master tradition.MovementsTraditional still-life
