Description

Large Delft style faience covered vase, three bells mark, 19th century, 44 cmA large covered vase in Delft style faience, blue camaïeu decoration, probably 19th century. Under the base, the three bells mark painted in blue, that of the De Drie Klokken ("The Three Bells") pottery, active in Delft from 1670 to 1841, and often reused afterwards.The faceted baluster body is divided into large reserves filled with flowers and branches, a willow and a bird, below a frieze of floral reserves at the shoulder and the foot. The domed, faceted cover repeats the same decoration; it is topped by a recumbent Buddhist lion, known as a Foo dog, one paw resting on a ball. The drawing is dense and careful, a deep blue on a bright white glaze.Very fine condition, the decoration remarkably fresh. A very small
