Description

A French bronze sculpture by Auguste Moreau (1834-1917), depicting a smiling young boy captured in the act of supporting, with two sturdy intertwined ropes, a large vessel resting against his side. The figure stands firmly on a naturalistic, rock-like base, displaying dynamic movement and a lively, spontaneous expression.An element of great functional and decorative interest is the large hollow vessel, designed as a cachepot, which makes the work not only a collectible sculpture but also a refined piece of home decor.The sculpture is distinguished by its exquisite original double patina: a warm brown hue on the boy's body and hair, in elegant contrast to the antiqued gray tones of the drapery, the vessel, and the rock-like base.Signature: Engraved on the rock base,
