Description

I present to you this magnificent painter's cup made of light celadon jade veined with traces of rust. A Chinese piece from the late 18th century, it is superb for the finesse of its details. The design depicts a dormouse heading toward a grapevine to feast on its grapes. The foliage serves as a handle.This piece of jade, with its light yet deep celadon color, is of very high quality. It is generously sized. A superb scholar's object for collectors of jade or Asian art.
