Period : 18th century

Condition : Bon état

Description

British light cavalry saber, Model 1796. Privately acquired specimen, manufactured by Woolley & Deakin of Birmingham. It features a distinctive steel mount, with a single crossguard and a leather-wrapped grip. The steel blade, featuring a fuller, shows signs of regrinding as well as a few nicks on the cutting edge. The sword comes with its original steel scabbard, which retains its two suspension rings. The manufacturer's mark is clearly engraved in a crest near the entrance to the scabbard. The blade measures approximately 83 cm in length, for a total length of 95 cm. A beautiful piece "in its original condition," displaying a dark patina throughout.
