Description

A Kashan rug of Iranian origin, made entirely of silk--including the pile, warp, weft, and fringes. Dating from the late 19th century, it exemplifies the refinement and exquisite craftsmanship of Persian rugs from that era.Its ivory field is adorned with a delicate scattering of motifs symbolizing creation and fertility, notably the seed motif, which is also found on Kashmiri shawls. These motifs, subtly framed by flowers in shades of gray and silver, create a design of great elegance.The design is framed by seven borders, the main one--in a sumptuous ruby hue--featuring a decoration of floral petals, garlands, foliage, and flowering palmettes, enhanced with shades of old gold and silver.Density: between 10,000 and 11,000 knots per dm².Notes: presence of minor natural oxidation.Dimensions:Length: 203
