Description

An elegant and imposing Regency-style sideboard, crafted around 1920 and made entirely of solid oak. This finely constructed piece features an architectural façade with three doors and three drawers, the central section of which projects forward. It is distinguished by the richness and delicacy of its carved ornamentation--including shells, floral motifs, foliage, and contoured moldings--all characteristic of the Regency decorative repertoire. The doors feature beautifully molded panels, while the uprights and the lower rail are adorned with meticulous carvings. The piece rests on cabriole legs that terminate in scrolled feet. Its parquet-style top and light, figured oak finish serve to highlight the exceptional woodwork and carvings. With its generous proportions and
