Description

A set of four nesting tables of increasing sizes that, by definition, can be stacked one inside the other to form a single table.Each table features a dynamic top with a mitered frame. A border of marquetry made of light-colored and stained wood surrounds the central section, which stands out due to its deeper hue. The edge of the tabletop is also adorned with identical marquetry. These small tables rest on slender legs that curve outward. The legs are connected by a small crossbar, ensuring the set's perfect stability.Gradually increasing in size, these four tables nest easily inside one another--a feature highly appreciated in small spaces.Period: 1930Excellent condition following restoration in our workshop.Shipping available via courier with appropriate protective
