Description

A superb 19th-century globe by Charles Périgot, featuring a brass ring very beautiful, small, and rare model that's easy to display. Moreover, it has its natural wood base--a feature that's uncommon and which we find very elegant. The globe features a brass ring divided into four 90-degree segments, topped by a copper hour disc divided into two sets of twelve hours, and the entire assembly rests on a brass table--also divided into four 90-degree segments--supported by three steel arches.The Globe was compiled by Charles Périgot, a history and geography teacher at Lycée St. Louis, and designed by ALP. Mouraux--Paris Geographical Institute--Parisian publisher Ch. Delagrave, located at 15 Rue Soufflot, specializing in school supplies.Charles Périgot, born January 22, 1828, in Rouen and died June
