Description

This chandelier adopts a rare horizontal composition: a large half-moon structure of wrought iron, its field entirely animated with confronted scrolls and counter-scrolls forming a highly decorative openwork network. Ten light arms, with foliate cups and sockets holding white faux candles with drips, spread out along the arc on two registers. A long chain with forged links provides the suspension, fixed at the top of the half-moon by a twisted ring.This horizontal format makes it an exceptional light fixture, designed to illuminate a long table or a counter, in the Château taste of French metalwork of the 1950s -- a vocabulary of generous scrolls inherited from the grilles and transoms of the 18th century.Condition report: Good overall condition. Even black patina, sound structure,
