Description

A tall, eggplant-purple glass paste vase with a flat, circular base, a conical shape, and an oval-shaped neck. The design, etched with acid and partially polished, consists of large poppy flowers.Signed "Muller Croismare" on the lower part. This signature was applied to pieces produced before 1914.The Muller Frères glassworks was founded in 1897 by Henri, Emile, and Désiré Muller, who were trained at the Saint-Louis crystal works and under Emile Gallé. They initially partnered with the Croismare glassworks, the Gobeleterie Hinzelin, and then established a second glassworks in Lunéville in 1910. Their Art Nouveau-era creations--primarily vases, objets d'art, and lamps--were heavily influenced by Gallé's style. Later, with the advent of Art Deco, they turned their attention to
