Description

Glazed porcelain sculpture from the famous Polonne factory (ZHK Polonnoye, Ukraine, Soviet era), created between the 1950s and 1970s. The figurine depicts the legendary hero Ivan Tsarevich in traditional boyar attire; he appears in a proud pose, with both hands resting on the hilt of his large sword. He wears a long caftan with a fur collar and a traditional headdress, and is depicted next to a rock on which a fur pelt is draped. The porcelain work is distinguished by a refined and nuanced monochromatic palette: a white background enriched by underglaze glazes in shades of dove gray, sepia, and beige. On the back of the base is the mark of the Polonne manufactory, painted under the glaze. Condition: excellent. The glaze is lustrous; there are no cracks, chips, or restorations.
