Description

Spectacular modernist ring in 750/°° yellow gold (18 KT, owl hallmark), set with a white Japanese Akoya cultured pearl, circa 1970.With a decidedly architectural design, this ring stands out for its particularly original asymmetrical geometric composition, evoking the pages of a half-open book or the unfolding of a fan.The setting consists of several thin, openwork sections of yellow gold, each varying in shape and length. Aligned on one side, they gradually flare out toward the other, creating a dynamic, ascending movement, almost arrow-shaped. Far from being a simple layering of offset plates, each element has its own geometry and contributes to the construction of an evolving volume, punctuated by a succession of lines and open spaces.This composition possesses a truly kinetic quality, suggesting a sense of unfolding movement despite the perfect stillness of its elements. The various sections are in fact connected by linking bridges that ensure the structure's rigidity and strength, while preserving its visual lightness.This construction creates a remarkable interplay of solids and voids, lending depth and dimension to the whole, while the various layers of gold accentuate the impression of movement.A round white Japanese Akoya cultured pearl gently punctuates this architectural design. Seemingly delicately placed on the setting, its generous, luminous spherical volume contrasts with the rigor of the straight lines, the sharp angles, and the delicacy of the gold panels.The contrast between the pearl's organic softness and the structured geometry of the setting is one of the main aesthetic appeals of this creation.The softly lustrous yellow gold surfaces highlight the lines and edges of this sculptural composition, whose deliberate asymmetry gives the ring a particularly assertive personality.A bold and expressive creation, characteristic of the formal explorations of 1970s modernist jewelry, where the piece becomes a true miniature sculpture, combining balanced proportions, geometric freedom, and a pursuit of movement.Total gross weight: 9.00 gPearl diameter:  6.14 mmFinger size: 52--resizing available upon request by our workshop (current diameter 1.64 cm / US size 6)Condition: imperceptible micro-scratchesFull payment can be made online via the website.Please feel free to contact us for any information regarding alternative payment methods.Are you a professional?
