Description

Character of the Renaissance period (circa 1530). Beautiful statuary of a character in blond oak of the first third of the 16th century (about 1530). The flexible line, ample draperies and ample supply, long curly hair, idealized expression and serene, is a German influence influenced by the weicher stil, a German manifestation of the international Gothic. The refined aesthetics of this remarkable statue or gesture is elegant and the expression lost in a long reflection, provides a rare and convincing testimony to the art of statuary of this early 16th century testifying precisely to the great canons of aesthetics German, South German first half of the 16th century. Good state of preservation Dimensions: Height 75 cm depth
