Pipe Bacchus

350 EUR

Period : 19th century

Condition : En l'état

Length : 43 cm

Description

Large sepiolite pipe or sea foam (hydrated magnesium silicate). The familiar name of sea foam refers to its great lightness, for the sepiolite was originally found in the form of ivory white pieces floating on the Black Sea. The main deposit is in Turkey at Eskishir, other deposits exist in Iran, Moravia, Crimea Spain and Morocco. This one is interesting by its size and the fineness of the decor. Horn horn, small splinters. With its case.
