the same time, he obtained a patent of cabinetmaker privileged of the King which offers him the possibility of putting a stamp on his furniture, without having obtained his letters of control. He moved to rue du Faubourg Saint-Antoine, in a building with the sign of the "Holy Spirit". During the 1740s, his production continued to grow, as did his fame. It is the supplier of many merchant mercier but also of a rich clientele and several European sovereigns. Many craftsmen sculptors, gilders, founders, chisellers or varnishers work for Latz. Finally, he collaborates regularly with watchmakers, for which he performs many boxes of pendulums. After his death in 1754, his widow perpetuated his activity.
