Description

Leader of the School of Paris he gave a vigorous impetus to the technical research of the Parisian ceramists. He showed a new route to all his followers. We know what was his success and the value of his work. The school of Paris presents a technical quality of an elaborate hard enamel that highlights a symphonic palette with contrasting bright colors and always bright. The development of molding processes used alone or at the same time as the modeling. The stylization of (bestions), flowers and foliage that will introduce in ceramics a harbinger of surrealism. Flat on pedestal with horns of abundance, brilliance of enamel bright colors signed Pull.
