its fantasias, its landscapes, but also Normandy, Brittany, Venice ... and knew how to move some great political figures, such as Ronald Reagan, Bill Clinton or George Bush, who own some of his paintings. Albert Pilot died in Rabat February 17, 2002. Very inspired by the Bou Regreg, this magnificent river that ends its race between Rabat, and the small city of Salé, Albert Pilot was subjugated by the fabulous light that dyes and illuminates the river to different hours of the day, opening on the grandiose panorama of the Kashah of Oudaïas. He painted it many times, each of his paintings having a different light. His Majesty the King of Morocco also has one of them, Les Oudaïas, Rabat (46X55).
