He focuses on painting scenes from the daily life of southern Spain, with an always precise line and a very luminous palette of colors. The Picador is a horse fighter. He waits for the moment to meet the bull, posted to the left of the toril's door, armed with a long spear. He is the first to suffer the attack of the bull throughout the first tercio. Like the Toreador, the Picador wears a richly embellished silk chaquetilla (jacket) and fresh butter tanned skin panties. To go further:
