Description

Virgin praying in a garland of flowers - Oil On Canvas 18th Century Around the central medallion, a crown composed of flowers barely intertwined, all varieties. The pictorial treatment of these extremely fine flowers and the brushstroke is sharp and very lively. This floral arrangement brings together flowers that bloom in the spring. This crown seems to be a likely composition that the painter has probably seen. This bouquet looks like something real and is not a construction of the painter's imagination. A vermilion signature lower right Camille C .... whose proper name is not easy to decipher. Natural and golden wood frame
