Description

Bird Finders Jean-Baptiste PILLEMENT Lyon 1728-1808 (Workshop). Jean Pillement contemporary of Hubert Robert and François Boucher, is at the hinge of the classic tradition of clear landscape and current influenced by the Dutch. Illustrating in particular this undergrowth landscape which is a fine example of its production and reveals its attachment to rock painting. In the "landscape composed" of rigor in the 18th century, Pillement prefers reverie and poetic meditation. He paints from nature, drawing inspiration from his many drawings and watercolors made during his many travels across Europe. the old farm, the undergrowth strewn with old tree trunks, in the center of the composition, the finders at the foot of the tree the child hanging on the branches taking the eggs are
