owners of the foundry of Trédion with a project of a foundry of second merger. Emile Besqueut (son of Jules) later became Ironmaster at the Kerino factory. It was rebuilt in 1869. It employs 110 people in 1874. Acquired by the family of Vallières aux Besqueut, it is taken again in 1910 by Charles Picquot who increases the production until 1920. After difficulties, the company is taken again in 1939 by Ferembal, which plans to set up a tin can manufacturing plant there. The war interrupts this project and the factory becomes a mere deposit of tin cans of this company. Part of the buildings, including cupolas, were destroyed around 1970 to build a set of four buildings. The rest of the factory was destroyed at the end of 2002 to make room for a housing complex.
