of luxury and which the Parisian and international clientele of the time craves. From 1878, he specialized in the creation of very studied and very learned Greek neo-Greek furniture and participated in the universal exhibitions of 1855, 1867, 1869 and 1878. He received the bronze medal at the exhibition of 1867, the medal of honor at the exhibition of the central union of 1869 and the medal of the progress in Vienna in 1873. The furniture of Charles-Guillaume DIEHL is distinguished by a particular care brought to the bronzes and are often stamped, more rarely dated.
