Description

This set of small Japanese masks, is made of white metal (regulate?) on which was deposited, probably by electroplating a very thin film of copper used in places, thus giving an illusion of bronze.
Of a very high quality of cast iron, the fineness of the details such hair and embroidery is perfectly restored.
From 5.9 to 7 cm high, traces of cleaner, slightly worn patina, we tried to solder a clip on the back two of them.
Probably French work of the late nineteenth century.
