Description

The company LAPIE had commissioned photographers to fly over the characteristic sites of France, almost a "heliographic mission" seen from above and 100 years later !
These photos, very often of an extreme artistic quality, were drawn on baryte silver paper and passed to the ice-cold for a brilliant rendering revealing the contrasts better.
They were used after basic geography teaching in colleges to visualize rivers, mountains, plains and cities ...
More than 70 images about 30 X 45 cm each, some a little horny, others with bites, or traces of scotch, all located (Alps, Pyrenees, Manche, Vosges, Loire, Toulouse, etc, etc ...) and with the stamp of the society and that of the college.
