Description

Beautiful virgin of seven pains dating from the first half of the nineteenth century.

It is a pretty virgin of devotion and probably of procession constituted of a slightly articulated mannequin in wood whose face, the hands and the feet are finely carved.

the rest of the sculpture is much more sketchy and intended to be dressed.

the arms are articulated.

It has its original clothes made of several white petticoats on which rests a large dress of black velvet and a large mantillas of taffeta lined with lace.

some wax stains on the velvet and some holes in the taffeta.

She is wearing a large crown of gilded wood and has on the chest a heart with seven pain
