Description

Console table in gilded wood from the Regency period around 1720/40. Its facade is carved with a large openwork apron and carved with acanthus leaves and lily flowers. The three sides are carved with a queen's decoration (flowers as part of orthodontic appliances). The table rests on four curved legs with mascaras with richly carved acanthus leaves and lily flowers, which end with carved legs with scrolls. This table is surmounted by an important royal red marble formed with bec-de-corbin. Ile-de-France work of the first half of the 18th century.
