Description

Important pair of neoclassical candelabras representing two young women with ancient drapes and each supporting a candlestick with seven lights. The white marble bases are circled in gilded bronze and decorated with natural bronze bas-reliefs also depicting two young women in the register of Roman mythology. The white marble highlights the two large bronze figures whose details are finely sculpted, notably the drapery and the expressive faces. At the top triumph two candlesticks with seven windings in finely chiseled gilded bronze up to the bottom of the binets. Excellent workmanship and large dimensions, signed Pradier and Susse Frères. James Pradier was born in 1790 and deeply marked the art world in the 19th century. Member of the Academy of Fine Arts, Grand Prix
