Description

Anatolian carpet from Turkey in wool on wool, measuring 59 cm wide by 102 cm long in the middle of the 20th century, 1940/1960 in good condition. This very nice carpet of small size, presents a large number of stylized patterns specific to the work of the villagers of Kirséhir and Moudjour, the use of a bright red married with bright yellow, yellow drawing on the tangy green, orange and white to highlight certain patterns randomly is typical of this region and these villages.Two hexagonal medallions finished in arrows carry within them the stylistic representation of the ram's horns.Each of the medallions, encased in four triangles decorated with hooks, represent a comb (tarak) used by the weaver.For Muslims it represents the hand of Fatima, a magic amulet to ward off bad luck, still
