Description

Large bronze Hermes tying his sandals. Hermès or Mercury appears to us in this beautiful bronze in the guise of a young man busy tying his sandals on a rock.

this beautiful neoclassical bronze is of very good quality and its patina is golden but slightly oxidized.

the god has a superb face and he rests on a block of lightly worked granite.

there is a small lack of bronze at the level of the link of his garment.

Perhaps he was carrying a quiver ...

as it dates from the first half of the 19th century it is melted in several parts and one of the arms moves slightly.

a very beautiful bronze of very good quality with a superb neoclassical aesthetic.
