Description

Charming 19th century English piece of furniture forming a bottle cooler.

it is chippendale style in walnut burl veneered on oak and therefore dated from the 19th century.

it has its beautiful zinc tray with original handles, moreover just as in France it was used as a planter at one time.

but this time the zinc tank did not suffer too much from this inappropriate destination.

we find brass handles on the sides which recall the handles of Falkland furniture.

a small drawer on the front with its original lock.

it rests on chippendale feet which slightly recall the Louis XV spirit.

A beautiful rare and charming piece of furniture very easy to place and whose utility remains "trendy".
