Description

Astonishing box with a lid decorated with an engraving (small visible signs of wear) showing a woman accompanied by a dog, the symbol of fidelity here remains equivocal when we look more closely at the weary posture of the lady. The inside of the cover has a second varnished engraving (visible cracks in the varnish), the subject of which is not in doubt, but has unfortunately been censored by a prudish hand. These are three figures including two standing women dressed as a nun and a man seated on a chair. A woman shows her posterior, while the other shows her pubis which has been removed by scratching the print, the man's sex has also been erased. This box is presented in its original condition, however it remains an object of curiosity. Delivery: 10 EUR for metropolitan
