Issoudun. In 1924, he was represented at the Tokyo International Exhibition. He also exhibited in Ostend. In Paris, he exhibited fairly regularly at the Salons des Tuileries from 1926 to 1931, and in the Autumn from 1926 to 1943.

He participated in the illustration of Paris 43, published by the City, with three drawings accompanying the text by Léon-Paul Fargue Les Saisons de Paris. He illustrated with twelve compositions Le Voyage en banlieue (Saint-Ouen) by Bataille-Henri. He painted landscapes in many regions of France: Issoudun region, the banks of the Loing, the Aisne, etc., but he was mainly devoted to the picturesque aspects of Paris and its surroundings, old quarters, the Zone, the Seine, the canals.
