Description

Important portrait of elegant woman in purple dress. This canvas is signed Charles Amable Lenoir, and dated 1914. This artist was born in Châtelailon in 1860, and died in Paris in 1926. In 1883, Charles Amable Lenoir joined the École Des Beaux-Arts, and became a pupil of William Bouguereau. He received from the hands of the latter the Legion of Honor, by decree of the Ministry of Public Instruction of July 1903. Charles Amable Lenoir is mainly famous for his portraits of women in the Art Nouveau period. The elegant one represented in this painting poses in a decoration of architecture and roses, with a landscape in the background. She stands at the top of a stone staircase, with its balustered banister. At the top right, a stone Medici vase is placed high up, with ivy on it. This elegant
