Description

Here is the explanation :

The plexiglass cube in the upper part comes from an implosion in a plexiglass production plant, following the stoppage of the machines, air entered and produced bubbles in the material on a about a meter long, this piece was cut and production restarted.

This length was segmented into three pieces. The central part was used for the development of this floor lamp, the other two pieces of roughly identical shape were transformed into vases. The salesman who worked for several years in this factory assured that this "anomaly" had never happened again, which makes it a rare and unusual object of curiosity.

Having acquired this "anomaly", I entrusted it to an artist, Didier DUPREY, painter sculptor and designer of contemporary jewelry, with whom we created this rotating, swiveling and articulated floor lamp, which hypnotizes by its magical presence.

It is signed by the artist Dated 2009 and numbered 1/1
