

Lantern And Its Smoke-proof Top In Translucent Blown Glass - Chains And Fixing In Brass, Bronze A

450 EUR

Period : 19th century

Condition : Bon état

Material : Glass

Diameter : 17 cm

Height : 36 cm

Description

Bell lantern and its smoke-trap, in translucent blown glass -

Chains and fixing in bronze aspect brass -

Early 19th century glassware, Argonne or Flanders?

The receptable bell (finished at its base with a button with stylized floral decoration), was intended to receive a candle or an oil lamp; its upper part has a hemmed edge to retain the brass strapping on which three hooks in the shape of stylized bird heads are attached. Note that a strip finishing the back of one of the bird heads has a small lack (see photo), which does not interfere with the strength and the grip of the entire lantern.

The smoke-eating kept the smoke from going towards the ceiling, in order to protect it from

Dealer

Les Couloirs du Temps - Samuel Collin

Folk Art and Popular Traditions, Regionalism, Curiosity

Tel : 06 81 53 21 70

Mobile : 06 70 45 88 65

Impasse des Ventes

Mézières-en-Drouais 28500

soot. The upper ring is in bronze.

Good condition. Some tiny bubbles in transparency.

Dimensions: 36 cm in total height and 17 cm in diameter of the glassware

Reference: publication "Glassware of use and prestige - France 1500-1800" by Jacqueline Bellanger (page 399: a lantern of identical shape and with the same hanging system is given by Mme Bellanger from the King Louis XVI period)