Description

Antique walnut cabinet, Italian manufacture of the Charles X period.

Particular and refined in the composure of the details, the architectural structure was certainly commissioned by a family of the high aristocracy. The three central drawers, finished on the sides by a carved and gilded cord, have decorated and gilded panels in mecca with three different representations. The first drawer depicts a coat of arms with the Napoleonic Imperial Eagle, the second depicts battle scenes, and the third a Napoleonic coat of arms. At the corners we find two balustrade columns with a secret opening mechanism from which two decorated panels can be seen that conceal an additional secret opening mechanism for the three drawers.

Certainly the cabinet was built to conceal
