Manufacture of Giuseppe Cantagalli, second part of the 19th century. The original Cantagalli manufactory was founded in Florence at the end of the 16th century. It was revived and up to date by Giuseppe Cantagalli who directed it until his death in 1878. It was then taken over by his two sons Ulysses (1839-1901) and Romeo (1838-1905). The name of the factory was Figli di Giuseppe Cantagalli. It was quickly recognized for the quality of its manufacture and its style of production which took up the standards of Renaissance ceramics. The manufacture participated in the Italian exhibition in London in
