Description

These two portraits depict a young brother and sister from the petite bourgeoisie, painted in April 1820 by Antoine Brun. The sitters, identified on the back as Philiberte Buttin and Jean Pierre Probel, are portrayed with intricate details, highlighting the fashion and identity of early 19th-century French society. The original frames require restoration, but the paintings themselves are well-preserved, showcasing the elegance of early 19th-century bourgeois attire.
