Description

Balloon chandelier in gilded bronze and crystals, Empire-inspired from the first half of the 20th century. From the classic structure in the shape of a circular teardrop, the chandelier presents two circles of acanthus leaves in gilded bronze, one at the top and the other larger in the center, from which cascade of crystal strands descends in gradation. faceted. The chandelier conceals 9 lights which, illuminating the crystals from the inside, when lit, improve the refractive effect, giving it more shine and splendor. This type of chandelier is actually called a hot air balloon or millelight precisely because of the precious and scenographic effect of the crystal decorative elements illuminated from the inside.
