Description

This exquisite portrait by Georges Breuil depicts a woman from the Comtat Venaissin region, in southern France. The subject is portrayed wearing the traditional bonnet à flots, a distinctive feature of Provençal attire symbolizing the elegance and heritage of the women of this region. She is draped in a cape lined with blue, delicately rendered in charcoal and highlighted with pastel, adding depth and contrast to the composition.

Breuil skillfully combines the precision of charcoal for the contours with pastel accents to bring out the intricate details of her face and clothing, capturing the essence of Provençal cultural identity. The dimensions are unframed, showcasing the artist's talent in conveying the character and spirit of his native region through
