Description

Italian oil painting on canvas, from the seventeenth century depicting the episode of the Old Testament in which Susanna, faithful wife of the wealthy Jew Joachim, is threatened during a bath in the garden by two elderly magistrates who used to frequent their husband's house.
The painting focuses on the group of figures, painted with strong strokes and almost completely omits the background, just hinted at in the foliage of the trees at the corners of the painting.
The wealth of details in the drapery e the chiaroscuro palette of the colors used denotes the influence of seventeenth-century Roman models.
