Description

Louis XIV armchair in walnut, with high inclined backrest, from the beginning of the 18th century. This very beautiful seat rests on two front legs turned into a baluster and two rear legs with cut sides, connected by an X-shaped spacer, surmounted by a spinning top. They end with half-pancakes. The armrest supports are recessed, the armrests in the shape of a butt .. The upholstery is in house condition and still remains comfortable. It is covered with a velvet fabric from Genoa, small wear of the velvet at the front of aasise (see last photo).
