Description

This work is a watercolor on paper, created around 1830 and attributable to the English context. The subject depicts a refined seated female figure, wearing a floral-patterned kerchief that covers her head.

In the lower right corner appears the signature with a monogram and an English crown, a detail that confirms the attribution to the period and to the British artistic milieu.

The condition is good: the softwood frame, contemporary to the work, shows signs of age and requires restoration, while the gilded surround decorated with natural ornamental motifs is in better condition.
