Description

With its two gilded bronze cornucopias, a motif dear to the reign of Louis XIV, this chest of drawers is commonly known as «commode à moustache». Protected by an elegant marble top, this chest-of-drawer has four rows but it takes five drawers in all. The first row under the belt is separated by a frame which differentiates two drawers and conceals a secret, an ingot hideout.

The low offset sleeper forms one with the last drawer. On the three sides of this chesnut chest of drawers, a very beautiful marquetry of amaranth, boxwood and ebony fillets reveal the perfect symmetry of this piece of furniture and provide a framework for gilded bronzes arranged in angles, handles, keyholes, ornaments and feet in acanthus
