Description

Beautiful ewer, Persian Aftaba in gilded bronze, engraved, covered with a pear-shaped body, in the shape of a fig.

Graceful esse handle decorated with two dog heads at the ends and subtle engravings on the whole of the object make it an ewer of great beauty and rare finesse.

The decoration engraved on the body and the whole of the object, very thin leaves and flowering plants

The arts and letters, period clothing, carpets and silk make these places a source of happiness for collectors of ancient Islamic objects.

The use of ewers, was mainly intended for ablutions, to wash the face and the hands, at the time of the religious ceremonies.

"The feast of the initiates, standing ready to serve,

From the 18th century and in very good condition.

These wonderful bronzes, were under the Safavid or Kadjar and Mughal dynasties, and in other countries around Persia, a prominent alternative to silver and they enjoyed the same status.

The Mughals are originally from Persia and the Middle East, but entered India in the 15th / 16th century. Around the 17th century, they reigned over the entire Indian subcontinent.

These objects have certainly lived by being the centerpieces of Persian houses and of Central Asia and India.

The last photo shows an ewer circa 1220-1240
from the Berlin Museum, note that the general shape remains the same.
