Description

These two corners are made of veneer (rosewood) and are covered with period marble. They are in a remarkable state of conservation and they have undergone some small usual restorations. At each end, on the outer frame, there are grooves dressed with brass rods and also in the center, between the two doors. The interior parts of the four doors are also veneered and decorated with geometric patterns in the shape of a diamond. The keyholes are in gilded bronze and in the lower part of each corner we find an application in gilded bronze in the shape of the curve. The marbles are period, from the 18th century, and have a granite decor. We guarantee the time (18th century) and the authenticity of this pretty pair of furniture.
